

ITALIAN PARLIAMENT MEETS; CRISIS IN WAR PREPARATIONS

ures adopted by the Cabinet for capturing diplomatic relations with Austria and the war that is expected to follow.

King Victor Emmanuel re-joined both the Ministers of War and Marine in audience today.

The Green Book, issued to members of the session, explains the negotiations with Austria which ended in failure. The triple alliance, it was stated, was repudiated by Italy in April.

Austria made one last effort to avert the inevitable. Her final proposals, made at the eleventh hour, were transmitted to the Chamber, which, by a unanimous vote, rejected them. The concessions came too late.

Lieutenant-General Count Cadorna, chief of the Italian general staff, has arrived with the members of his staff at Vienna on the Austrian border.

Police: Two Socialist members of the chamber, who boasted that, during the recent stormy days, they had converted many industrial Socialists to the "interventionist" cause.

Copies of telegrams from the Mayors of towns on the Austrian frontier declaring that the Italian people on the border were willing to make any sacrifice for the unification of the country were distributed among the members.

These had been received by Senator Salandra before Parliament convened. At the same time word was received from many cities throughout northern Italy that "peace demonstrations" had resulted in failure, the pacifists being put to flight by the pro-war adherents.

It is reported that the Austrian and German consuls here will be notified that the frontier with Italy is closed.

ITALY EXPLAINS HER STEPS TOWARD WAR

Green Book Issued by Government Sets Forth Negotiations With the Austrians.

By International News Service.

Rome, May 19.—The Italian government today issued a Green Book, setting forth the Italian position in the present crisis situation and revealing for the first time the full extent of the Italian position.

Map of Italian frontier. Shaded portion shows territory demanded by Italy and which Austria refuses to yield, thereby precipitating Italy's preparations for war.

The Green Book states that Italy remained faithful to the Triple Alliance pact, but declares that in the summer of 1914 Austria, without regard to Italy, without hearing Italy's advice of moderation, went on to ultimatum to Serbia that caused the present war.

On December 29 Austria began changing her government. Baron Buri, succeeding Count Berchtold, the Austrian Foreign Minister and Premier.

THOMAS A. DEWIRE
HIGH GRADE CONFECTIONS

"We would not go back to horses again under any circumstances, and only regret that we did not put on Autocars long before we did," says T. A. Dewire, Confectioner, of Somerville, Mass., who, with his two brothers, own one car each. They have greatly increased their business since putting on the Autocars, taking care of customers which could not have been reached by horse. He further states that since he bought his car in the Fall of 1912 it has never been out of commission when wanted, and has proven prompt, reliable and economical. Ask Boston's leading business houses what they think of their Autocars. Call at the Autocar Sales and Service Co., Commonwealth Ave. and Beacon St., Boston, or write for catalog and list of over 2500 concerns using Autocars in every line of business.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES CONTINUE AT BOTH ENDS OF THE FRONT

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service

PETERSBURG, May 20.—Russian troops continue their successes at both extremities of the 400-mile front extending from the Baltic Sea to the Black Sea, but their situation in Galicia is still critical.

The bombardment of Przemyśl is increasing in violence. Shells are falling ten miles from the center of the town. This shows that the Germans have abandoned their policy of warding off the main fortifications in front of the town.

New, Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)
Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair or fuzz from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to use genuine delatone.—Advertiser.

The Railroad Committee Has Turned the Public Service Commission's Bill to Aid the New Haven Into a Piece of Injustice to the Public

When the New Haven asked Massachusetts to permit it to reorganize its disordered financial condition and the Public Service Commission recommended to the Legislature a form of reorganization, with the safeguards and limitations which the Public Service Commission thought proper, and the New Haven Railroad accepted the proposals of the commission, the AMERICAN and everybody were content. The New Haven was on its knees asking for help, and there was no sense in denying assistance if no harm would come from rendering it, and permanent, solid good might come to the railroad from it.

One of the conditions prescribed by the Public Service Commission was that the New Haven should consent to a limitation of its corporate powers in Connecticut, so that its powers there might be coextensive with its powers in Massachusetts. The object of this stipulation was to prevent the New Haven AGAIN from claiming a right, under its Connecticut powers, to do things forbidden by our Massachusetts laws. The New Haven agreed to this stipulation and, in accordance with the understanding, an act was passed in Connecticut which abolished the requirement that a majority of the directors of the New Haven should be residents of Connecticut, and its corporate powers also were limited in several directions to conform with our Massachusetts laws.

In the meantime, the bill to enable the New Haven to reform its financial status has come out of committee very much changed from the plan recommended by the Public Service Commission.

There are several changes for the worse in the bill reported by the Railroad Committee. One bad change is the emasculation of that provision which would prevent the New Haven from transferring upon the public the losses which it has incurred through bad investments, bad management and illegal issues of securities. The Public Service Commission's bill merely gave a technical legality to a certain class of New Haven stock NOW OUTSTANDING IN THE HANDS OF THE PUBLIC. But let the conferring of that legality upon this stock might be held to make the stock the basis for the determining of freight and passenger fares, the Public Service Commission very carefully provided that the validation bill should not be so construed and that the public should not be bound to pay rates, freight or passenger, or be estopped in its demand for railroad service, by the validating of this stock. The object of the validation, so far as the Public Service Commission was concerned, was to enable the railroad to fund its floating indebtedness and short time debts, now bearing high interest, at low rates of interest. This is obviously to the public advantage, because it reduces the expense. But the so-called caveat which prevents the railroad from attempting to give the validation of this stock any other significance ought to be returned to the bill by striking out the impairing phrase, "until such amortization account is fully extinguished."

But while these and other defects of the Railroad Committee's bill are important, they fade entirely away before the great evil which is contained in the first section of the bill relating to the amortization of the losses incurred by the New Haven Railroad in recent years. It is probable that the Railroad Committee did not realize that it was playing with fire when, at the request of someone who knew vastly more about what he was doing than the gentlemen of the Railroad Committee, they injected this amortization feature into the bill. The Public Service Commission did not provide a detailed amortization plan for several reasons. But in the caveat provision it carefully reserved the power to adopt an adequate amortization plan at the proper time. We cannot adopt a plan for making good the losses on a railroad until we have determined the extent of those losses, and we cannot determine the extent of the New Haven losses until we know the value of the property which it has purchased, and we cannot know the value of the property which it has purchased until it has been sold under the decree of the Federal Court.

Therefore, the most important fact which must enter into the determination of the New Haven's losses will not be known until the time comes when the New Haven's illegal purchases must be sold. It was the idea of the commission that next year would be time enough in which to devise such an amortization scheme. In the meantime the commission would have knowledge which it proposed to obtain by an inquiry into all the New Haven's transactions under the resolution which it recommended the Legislature to pass and which this Railroad Committee has most unfortunately rejected.

Now the Railroad Committee's bill provides for an amortization before the best test of the extent of the New Haven's losses is available. It further cripples the investigation of the New Haven's affairs by rejecting the resolution of the Public Service Commission for a thorough inquiry. It also eliminates from the Public Service Commission's bill the right to examine the books and the accounts of the subsidiary companies of the New Haven where the losses might be expected to be found.

But most important of all, the bill reported by the Railroad Committee provides that the unearned increment of the railroad's real estate may be set off against the losses which the New Haven has suffered through its mismanagement and other illegal transactions. During the last two or three years it has become evident that the railroads of the country were conspiring to make what is known in economics as the unearned increment a basis for the making of freight and passenger charges. Nothing could be more atrocious and unjust and inconsistent with the law and the settled policy of the country towards public service corporations than such a scheme.

A large and growing element among the intelligent citizens of the country insists that even in real estate privately owned there is no justice in the private appropriation of the unearned increment. By this term is meant the increased value which is given to property by the activity and enterprise of those who do not own it and to which the owner contributes nothing. If a man owns a remote piece of vacant land and the community grows up around him and they establish a fire department and they lay sewers and build highways and build public schools and by their activity, enterprise and increase in population they greatly increase the value of that land, then this increase is called the "UNEARNED INCREMENT." Millions of studious, thoughtful people believe that no private owners should be allowed to appropriate this increased value which is contributed wholly by the general community and is not reaped at all from the sweat of the owners' own brows. These students of political economy contend that this increase should go entirely to the public, since it is the public which gives it the increased value. But whatever may be the justice of this view with respect to private owners of real estate, it has the sanction of immemorial custom.

On the other hand, there is nothing that can be said in favor of allowing a railroad to appropriate to itself the fruits of the increase of its own real estate and make the enterprise and the activity and the courage of the community the basis of future public burdens and taxation by the railroad.

To illustrate: The East Boston Pier was purchased years ago by the Boston & Maine Railroad for a little over two hundred thousand dollars. That payment came from money contributed by stockholders in the first instance, but ultimately it came from money contributed by the people who traveled and shipped merchandise over the Boston & Maine Railroad and who thus paid car fares and freight rates to that road. During the period that the Boston & Maine has held this eastern pier, Boston has developed, increased in population, extended its park system, its sewer and water systems, its public schools, and by these acts has more than doubled the value of that East Boston Pier. Now the scheme of the railroads is to make the increase of several hundred thousand dollars in the value of that pier and of the innumerable railroad stations and rights to way the basis for increased freight rates and passenger fares. Could anything be more monstrous than such a proposition? It is difficult to argue against this, because its mere statement is the strongest denunciation of it which can be made.

The position of a public service corporation, particularly a railroad, in the matter of the real estate, is entirely different from the position of a private real estate owner.

First: Its stockholders do not take the risk that a private owner takes when he buys land. Second: The public does not delegate to a private owner the power of eminent domain, which enables the railroad to take land from a private owner, whether he wants to sell or does not.

Third: A private owner is not given a monopoly in the region where he buys his land by the law and a railroad is protected from competition through such a duplication of competing railroads as will seriously impair the profits of the existing road.

Fourth: If a private owner builds on his property, he takes the risk of bad judgment or of misfortune. If his investment turns into a loss he has no recourse to the public. On the other hand, the railroad, when it meets with serious losses, EVEN IF THOSE LOSSES ARE DUE TO DELIBERATE MISMANAGEMENT AND LAWLESSNESS, invariably appeals to the public for legislation which will enable it, by the power of taxation, exercised through an increase of fares and freight rates, to recoup those losses out of the pockets of the public.

Fifth: This scheme to appropriate the unearned increment has been at war with every established policy and theory concerning the relation between railroads and the public from the moment the first railroad tie was laid in this country to the present hour. If our public servants are corrupt enough to allow this scheme to get a foothold in this country, it will be the worst disaster which the people of the United States have suffered since the Civil War.

From the beginning of railroad history this country has always considered the value of a railroad, for the purpose of determining rates, to be the amount of money which its stockholders put into it, and no more.

Under the scheme of amortization quietly grafted upon this New Haven bill, there is this vicious principle, which might not only nullify any attempt to compel the New Haven to make good its losses, but would give that railroad a great margin with which to enter into still another saturnalia of mismanagement and corruption.

The AMERICAN had supposed that the New Haven was dealing fairly with the State in its attempt to reorganize its financial status. Possibly the New Haven is not a party to the injection of this extraordinary proposal into the simple plan of validating some outstanding stock, and it is possible also that the lobby-out-of-a-job has caused this scheme to be grafted upon the proposed New Haven legislation in order to make all honest men oppose the bill. In that case the friends of the New Haven ought to do what they can to purge the bill of this untoward joker.

Let us have a plan for the amortization of the New Haven's losses this year if the Railroad Committee thinks it wise. But let it really amortize, and let it be based upon sound principles.

The Hen and the Superwoman

By HELEN RING ROBINSON

THE latest word about the superwoman comes from Jules Verne, who declares she will appear first in America.

Maybe. But it is a long, long way to reach her.

Meanwhile, consider the hen.

There is nothing forced in this transition. For, after occasional communion with the hens in my friend Miranda's poultry yard I am convinced that the path of the superwoman will lead past a henhouse, steam-heated, it may be, with patent-perches and scientific brooders—but still a henhouse.

There are men with canned minds and a disposition to burble about masculine chivalry, who show their contempt for women by speaking of them as "hens," or, still more gladly, as "old hens."

I resent this epithet when applied to a woman who is a mere "super," a parasitic person whose chief interest is in learning whether check-bones are being worn low or high this season; how to make her figure conform to the latest of her gown; and what is the best all-around color for her hair.

I resent it because I am testifying in honor of the hen.

If, however, the woman is not a "super" but a superwoman, she should prove responsive to such comparisons.

The other day I saw Miranda's man-of-all-work trying to drive a white leghorn toward a roosting place. The hen, evidently, had other ideas, but every avenue of escape seemed cut off.

Suddenly, by a strategic flank movement which might have done credit to General von Hindenburg himself, she made a dash through an ambuscade of curlew bushes and away into the long grass, her triumphant cackle at the exact moment of safety proving even more clearly than her method of escape that she had brains.

Independence, resourcefulness, determination, efficiency, and that high order of intelligence which knows the present, prophetic moment for cackling—surely even a superwoman might look over the fence understandingly at such a hen.

Miranda makes a tidy little income from her poultry yard. It is evident, then, that her hens are "economically independent"—never more so than when they are tattering their chicks in scratching and busting the succulent earthworm.

The superwoman, too, will be "economically independent." But that does not necessarily mean she will leave her home to find productive work in the industrial world.

We hear much sentimentally today about the sacredness of motherhood. What we need is an economic appreciation of the value of trained motherhood.

The woman who bears and rears children for the State, who, in her home, distributes health and comfort and happiness, is as truly "economically independent" as the engineer who tunnels mountains. Here plenty of people will exclaim, "Of course!" But our whole economic structure, built, as it is, on a falsification of life's values, says nothing of the sort. It penalizes motherhood.

Perhaps the superwoman will change all that. It may be that by bringing about an economic readjustment of the value of the home-maker she will prove as the superwoman.

Science for Workers

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—Please enlighten me on the following:

"1. Can circles be squared? If so, for what purpose?"

"2. What causes the deadening of sound of a violin when a mute is placed on the bridge? This mute is merely a piece of ebony and only comes in contact with the bridge. Does the mute absorb the vibration? Please answer in the American."—Walter C. Oip, Manchester, Wis.

A.—1. About three times each year during forty-four years I have published that the circle cannot be squared by using a finite number of terms, and in a length of time to do the work in less than an infinite time. Both impossible. There is no purpose save idle curiosity.

2. The mute does what is called damping the vibration of violin strings in the substance of the bridge. The materials of the bridge transmit vibrations from strings to the materials of the violin at harmonic rates. And fashioned with care. Then add more material and rates are changed—the vibrations cannot actuate the increased quantity of matter. The words absorbing, quenching, destroying, damping vibrations may all be used.

In-Shoots

The fellows who are always complaining that the town is slow seldom display a disposition to move out.

None is so blind as the fellow who can see nothing attractive in the peck-a-bow shirt waist.

None is immune from Spring fever, but the lazy man's symptoms are always the most acute.

Can a woman safely commit herself to a man who has been careless of his marital vows, his professional honor, and his civic responsibilities?
